Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	This is a nice article dealing with ethnocentrism and global impact on herdsmen menace in Nigeria. I very much enjoyed reading this piece. I would suggest the authors just to make a few adjustments to the article: 1. At the moment the paper does not have a clear-cut delimitation between introduction and literature review. It should be inserted a section entitled 'Literature Review' before the third phrase of the paper. 2. In the introduction authors should explain international importance of their research and their contribution to the theory of ethnocentrism and global identity. 3. I would suggest the authors to add some references to the concepts of global identity versus 'glocalisation'. There are plenty of literature on debating this issue (see R Robertson's works, Eric Swyngedouw 2004 etc). 4. The role of identity was also studied in other similar studies, see the issue of identity of shepherds: O'Brien, T, Cretan, R (2019), The role of identity in the 2015 Romanian Shepherd Protests. Identities: Global Journal of Culture and Power. Doi: 10.1080/1070289X.2017.1400322 5. On page 3, authors stipulate that: 'Psychologically, it is instructive to note that persons displaced during the crises may tend to internalize the conflict approach to interpersonal interaction'. For this assertion there were previous studies showing this issue, so a citation could be placed here, please see: Vesalon, L., Cretan, R., (2012), 'Development-induced displacement in Romania: the case of Rosia Montana mining project, Journal of Urban and Regional Analysis, 4(1), 63-75 6. Conclusions looks very short. I would suggest limitations of the study, suggestion for further research, and recommendations to be merged in the section Conclusion.
