The paper can be accepted for publication only after polishing it and improving the following:

- the abstract contains too much bibliographic, it must be reduced and added phrases to develop the objectives - the research methodology - the results of the paper.
- explain the research area, the main crops, the soils; including the experimental field, must detail the soil and its equivalence with international classifications.
- all tables must have a note below the table with the abbreviations used in the table.
- the text of the paper should be polishing, so that no words are stuck, determined values attached to the measuring unit; the work should not contain 0.00, it will be 0.
- the conclusions must be drawn from the paper and at least two conclusions added.
