As they fed back my comments, I do not see any improvement. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- The authors said their questionnaire was standard and has been used. You should see the references they cited. These references are not in an international journal. It is possible that the questionnaire had been used locally and might not be accepted in psychological field for stress test.</li> <li>- They said the difference in numbers of volunteers in 4 blood groups was just only the limitation of their study. I think it was inappropriate subject selection which was preventable in the project planning.</li> </ul>
