

Editor's comment:

I have checked the paper.

I cannot check statistics done in the paper.

The conclusion is interesting enough to be published.

I hope minor revisions as follows.

The conclusion, "although domestic investment has positive but insignificant impact on economic growth, due to low productivity in Nigeria (vicious circle), is interesting.

The findings should be compared with other developing countries in the section of discussion.

How are other countries, such as in Malaysia (literature 3)?

The present paper pays too strong attention on Nigeria, so readers cannot understand the results could be applicable to other developing countries.

Author's feedback:

The limited application to other developing economies is due partly to the differences in economic, structural, political and social characteristics. Though we recognized some similarities amongst them, thus some extensions have been made based on empirical investigations.