Compulsory REVISION comments		Although the paper has already included Grice (1989) Conversational maxims which are expected to be followed during conversation(see lines 29-32). It has now been elaborated (see lines 51-53).
Minor REVISION comments	What can make them to be true to others is there any theory if so kindly include. So that the faculty can realize that deception to be erased from any ones mind.
Optional/General comments	It is completely true that for getting self benefit, little benefit to others or harming others its all happening in the organizational level. One has to have self ethics in working environment as an individual working in organization as a faculty sharing information is knowledge, if one grows similarly others also can grow by using same strategy. But passing real information is lacking and half cooked information really detrimental to the organization. Faculties should think that it is a right time to realize and concentrate on organizational growth and outcome. It should not only get them recognized but also it is image building of the organization. Thus one should have working ethics in organization which ever bring positive growth to all faculty students and institution.
