

Editor's Comment:

However, in the very last sentence of conclusion section, I suggest an explanation for applying into baked product. See the attached file.

Author's Feedback:

Baked products are widely acceptable and consumed by almost all the socio-economic groups. They are considered as potential delivery systems for food fortification, enhancement and functionality. They form ideal matrix through which functionality in terms of bioactive components could be delivered to consumers without altering their organoleptic properties and acceptance of the food product, hence the interest in baked products. However, based on your submissions, I have added more information on baked products in the introduction and corrected and edited all accordingly.

Thanks.