Compulsory REVISION comments	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Very accurate data are collected from people who suffered by floods. However, any further analyses is done over those data. 203 Questionnaires and personal interviews are collected, but any correlation or comparison is done between them. - Some graph and visual information would be of value. - Preventive measurements are announced at the beginning (line 23). However, anything is said lately. - Dark urine disease is mentioned several times (line 182), however, no link with floods is explained. - The CCASHH project in Europe is barely mentioned (line 290), however, nothing else is explained about its utility for general floods.
