

Editor's Comment:

I have read carefully the reviewers' comments, the two versions of the manuscript, and the Authors' feedback. The manuscript contains a deep discussion of the pertinent literature, and is also concluded with an experimental section. It is on the whole too prolix, and should be dramatically reduced in size. Moreover, the English form is quite poor and should be carefully checked and amended, possibly by the help of an English-speaking person. Finally, the Author(s) should choose a definite route in conceiving the revised work: is it a review on the molybdo-enzymes, or is it rather an experimental work?

In conclusion, the manuscript could be reconsidered, provided that the Author(s) follow(s) these directions.
