Compulsory REVISION comments	This article presents interesting ideas, but presents some key weaknesses on which the authors should work. In particular I think the most noteworthy, in my opinion are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- The article should present a deeper and more systematic review of the literature, in a more organized way, and above all, spun with the rest of the article.</li> <li>- It does not seem clear what the scientific methodology followed in the research has been. There are no clear research questions, it is not well motivated what problem we solve and why this system is necessary.</li> <li>- There are not included results of easy form to interpret, nor comparative with respect to the revised works in the state of the question.</li> <li>- It would include a section to discuss these results and to validate the proposal itself. Furthermore, I believe that the section on conclusions is too succinct and does not present any promising future lines in the area.</li> </ul>	A deeper review has been extensively carried out by the authors and a result, more 'flesh' has been added with better presentations for enhancement. A section has been added in 1.1 called research motivation to give a clear code direction about what the authors intent to do. A section labelled discussion of results ha been added to give detailed explanation about how functionalities relate to produce the overall objective of the study as contained in the motivation of the study. Suggestions for future researches and improvement on the work have been suggested.
