Please explain more on this. Line 105 Please explain the acronym BMI Lines 126-129: Commonly used terms resulting from the BMI classification should be used, not "slim" or "slightly obese". Is there no statistical difference between BMI of male and female? The difference in mean values is quite large. Lines 135-137: Please, Please, re-edit the sentence " Orthorexia nervosa of the university students was analysed with respect to gender and the male and female students were compared in regard to having nervosa risk (Table 5)" because it is unclear.
Minor REVISION comments	It is suggested to standardize the terms used (Orthorexia Nervosa not Orthorexia Nervoza). Lines 165-167: Error in quoting, please check and change.
Optional/General comments	I recommend using terms "male" and "female" in manuscript, as "girls" and "boys" usually refers to children.
